

I am writing to comment on the Low Power FM stations that are being given consideration over national or regional services such as the one my radio station, KLOVE, uses. KLOVE provides a music/news station to me and my family that can be trusted to never broadcast obscene or offensive materials. It provides family friendly programming. As a mother of two young daughters, I want to be able to provide them with wholesome music opportunities. I think KLOVE has an outreach to many needy people in the communities in which it is heard and taking it off the air would be a dis-service. It supports wholesome values and has a positive and encouraging impact on communities all across America. It is almost discriminatory in that KLOVE is a Christian radio station that would no longer be able to broadcast to all who wish to receive it. Many Christians the world over will feel this loss. It provides encouragement to those who need it, is non-biased when reporting the news and would be in the public's best interest to stay on the air and able to be broadcast on an FM station.
